SUMMER LAUGHS

Amidst the calorific peace-heads and eight-point war news, this summer's patient mortal wants to see a refreshing cartoon by R. W. SATTERFIELD. "Sat" and his little bear portray the bright side of every big piece of news that can be pictured.

A. D. CONDO is the famous creator of "Everett Trio," the greatest two-column comic feature ever drawn for any newspaper. Human shams and human pests meet their Nemesis in Everett. Their fate at his hands has always the good-natured approval of millions.

GENE AHERN'S screaming conceit is "Squirrel Food," a rollicking comic strip whose principals are sketched through the drollest farces. The madcap gambols of "Balmy Benny" and "George" are prime helpers in turning the soporific season into days of laughter.

M. C. BLOSSER draws "Freckles", that chubby, tan-cheeked boy whose words and romps have won him a foremost place in the realm of child readers. Blosser's comic is flooding hundreds of thousands of homes with sunshine in which old and young alike delight to bask.

J. R. GROVE is America's pioneer war humorist. The stout-hearted heroes of his "Camp Comedies" carry mirth with the mettle of battle to the world's greatest army of readers. The war's comic hit with a real hurrah—that's the work of Grove.

TOM TOPLIFFE draws the greatest of comics for the top of the sport page—the only strictly sport strip of which we know. Fun like Topliffe's interests not only the dyed-in-the-wool fan but it captivates Mr. Average Reader, too.

Miles of smiles flow from the pen of WALTER R. ALLMAN, author of the inimitable family strip, "Doings of the Duffs." His brain-children, from "Tom Duff" to "Olivia," are gay-hearted thoroughbreds. Their wholesome humor has unequaled dash and genuineness.
